Anotácie

This paper analyzes the literary and philosophical work The Moviegoer, which was written by the American writer Walker Percy. The book itself was strongly influenced by the philosophy and thoughts of the existential philosopher Søren Kierkegaard. The study solves an existential problem of modern man's alienation, despair and crises in the modern age. Except for Walker Percy's work The Moviegoer I focus solely on Søren Kierkegaard's book Sickness unto Death, especially its concept of despair and self-consciousness.

This paper analyses Kierkegaard's work „The Concept of Anxiety“ and reflects its importance and meaning in the literary work of Anglo-American writer W.H. Auden. Anxiety reflects our being and each individual has to face it in different forms. The relation of anxiety to freedom and knowledge, to time and eternity is assessed with the care and sensitivity that Kierkegaard's writing demands and has an influential impact on Auden's work. Auden subsequently implements Kierkegaard's concept of anxiety into his outstanding poem The Age of Anxiety. The poem deals with human's quest to find its identity and substance in the volatile and increasingly industrialized world, facing the feeling of anxiety and aloneness of man in modern society.

This paper analyses Don DeLillo's novel 'Falling Man', which is concerned with the symbolic nature of terrorist violence portrayed and interpreted through the mass media that are able to create a specific simulacrum of reality. DeLillo's narrative examines the possibilities of reinventing one's individual identity and the tendency of individuals to construct their own identities through a group mentality as well. The paper also deals with the influence of the Danish thinker Søren Kierkegaard on the novel 'Falling Man'.

Moralistic Therapeutic Deism (MTD) is a new spiritual trend that is increasingly changing the religious landscape of in the Euro-American cultural provenience. Though appealing to the generation of 'emerging adults' (age 18-25), MTD results in undesirable life-outcomes that prompt religious scholars, theologians, and sociologists to carefully study its roots, expressions, and possible alternatives. Using S. Kierkegaard's religious existentialism as a case study, the authors argue that religious existentialism has the potential to face the detrimental effects of MTD and to reinvigorate stagnating religious communities.

This paper is a philosophical reflection on anxiety and fear in literary work of outstanding American writer Don DeLillo. Anxiety and fear are the part of human being. Some of DeLillo's novels and theatrical plays are magnificent meditations on them. This paper analyses the concept of anxiety, fear and death presented in literary work of Don DeLillo and highlights various forms of temporality developed throughout the authorship. Among the topics are personal tragedy of man living in consumer society, tragedy based on attacks in New York, and the futuristic idea of using the achievements of modern science and technology to help man overcome death. Don DeLillo was inspired by various philosophers and his literary work draws extensively on existentialist thought.

Anotácie

The aim of this paper is to highlight the importance of a remarkable writer, Wystan Hugh Auden (1907 - 1973), who was strongly influenced by the philosophy and thinking of the Danish philosopher, Søren Kierkegaard, especially by his works Either - Or, The Concept of Anxiety, Works of Love and The Sickness Unto Death. Auden's poetry is noted for its stylistic and technical achievement, its engagement with politics, morals, love, purity and religion, and its unique variety in tone, form and content. It is enormously rich in allusions, poetic tone and intellectual power. The content of his poems ranges from philosophical meditations, the concept of being, the concept of man, anxiety, aloneness and despair, to the contemporary crises of modern man and the evolution of society. His poetry becomes a resource for existential reflection in modern society with the technocratic and hedonistic tendencies of consumer society of which this paper is an in-depth analysis
