Title: The Problem of the Dynamics of Metaphorical Systems in Political Discourse

Source: JAZYK A POLITIKA: NA POMEDZI LINGVISTIKY A POLITOLOGIE III. BETWEEN LINGUISTICS AND POLITICAL SCIENCE III

Pages: 40-50

Published: 2018

Abstract: The contribution is focused on the analysis of dynamics as one of the fundamental characteristics of the current, actual and historically conditioned context of the formation of political discourse in the Slovak and Russian complanative plans. The objects of research are the metaphors of political discourse, oscillating around the current political process in Russian and Slovak political discourse. The study has an application character and is based on relevant and up-to-date research from the relatively new branch of idiadiachronic political metaphorology. An important place in current linguistic research of socio-political discourse is precisely the revelation of the character and the relationship of the dynamics of metaphorical systems and their models, their stability, their significance constant and stability in contradictory grasp to their development, updating and variability depending on the socio-political changes in their historical outfall. We will try to focus on the dynamics of changes that can potentially hit the metaphor, metaphoric models (and metaphoric systems) both horizontally and vertically (metaphor as dominant, recessive, sleeping, waking, unidirectional (towards the target domain or source domain only) or multimodal (two-dimensional and multi-directional (for Turner and Fauconnier's theory of blending or conceptual integration, etc.).
