Cultural studies

Brief exam description: The exam focuses on a variety of issues surrounding the topics listed in this document, related to British and American history and culture. As both contemporary cultural traditions emanate from a similar source, the focus will be put on the interrelationship between various aspects of cultures in Great Britain (including its past and present Commonwealth) and the US (including issues surrounding US territories). Areas of competence required:

- Candidates are required to demonstrate their ability of creative thinking and to analyze, compare and contrast a variety of issues relevant to the chosen topic, using specific examples they consider relevant and avoiding unsupported generalizations.
- Candidates are required to identify various idiosyncrasies of British and American cultures in order to be able to compare and contrast both cultural traditions.
- Candidates are required to provide support for their general claims, i.e. to use specific examples from relevant sources, referring to specific events, historical figures, etc.
- Candidates are required to introduce the chosen topic briefly, then move on to discuss relevant details, and try and respond to any questions raised or comments made by members of the state exam committee.
- Candidates are required to avoid stating the obvious (e.g. irrelevant claims, extended biographies or historical accounts, etc.).
- Candidates are required to make references to any of the recommended literature they consider relevant.
- Candidates are required to use established academic terms/concepts related to cultural theory or history rather than non-academic ones.
- Most importantly, candidates are encouraged to use their original ideas and interpretations, however unusual or controversial, as long as they can be supported by evidence from sources relevant to the chosen topic.

Exam topics and areas:

1. The dawn of history in Britain: pre-Roman and Roman Britain, the Anglo-Saxon period and the Norman Conquest and their heritage. Their impact on contemporary British culture (language, architecture, etc.).

2. The 16th – 18th century Britain: describe the achievements of the most important sovereigns of the House of Tudors and the Stuarts. Describe the impact of the era on the political system, religion, art, etc.
3. The birth of a Colonial Empire and the Industrial Revolution: the geographical location of British colonies, their role in the British consolidating their power, the impact of British colonization on the colonies themselves, the effect the Industrial Revolution had on everyday life in Britain.
